Abstract

This presentation will provide details of two projects: a recent report from GLA economics providing employment and other data on the creative industries in London from 1994-2005; and a progress report on our proposed 'cultural audit for London'. This latter aims to supplement employment and industry data by providing comprehensive information about London’s cultural infrastructure and consumption. We aim to benchmark London against other world cities, and are actively engaging with other city statistical agencies with a view to harmonising and pooling information. The presentation will explain the basis of the project, difficulties, and progress so far.
